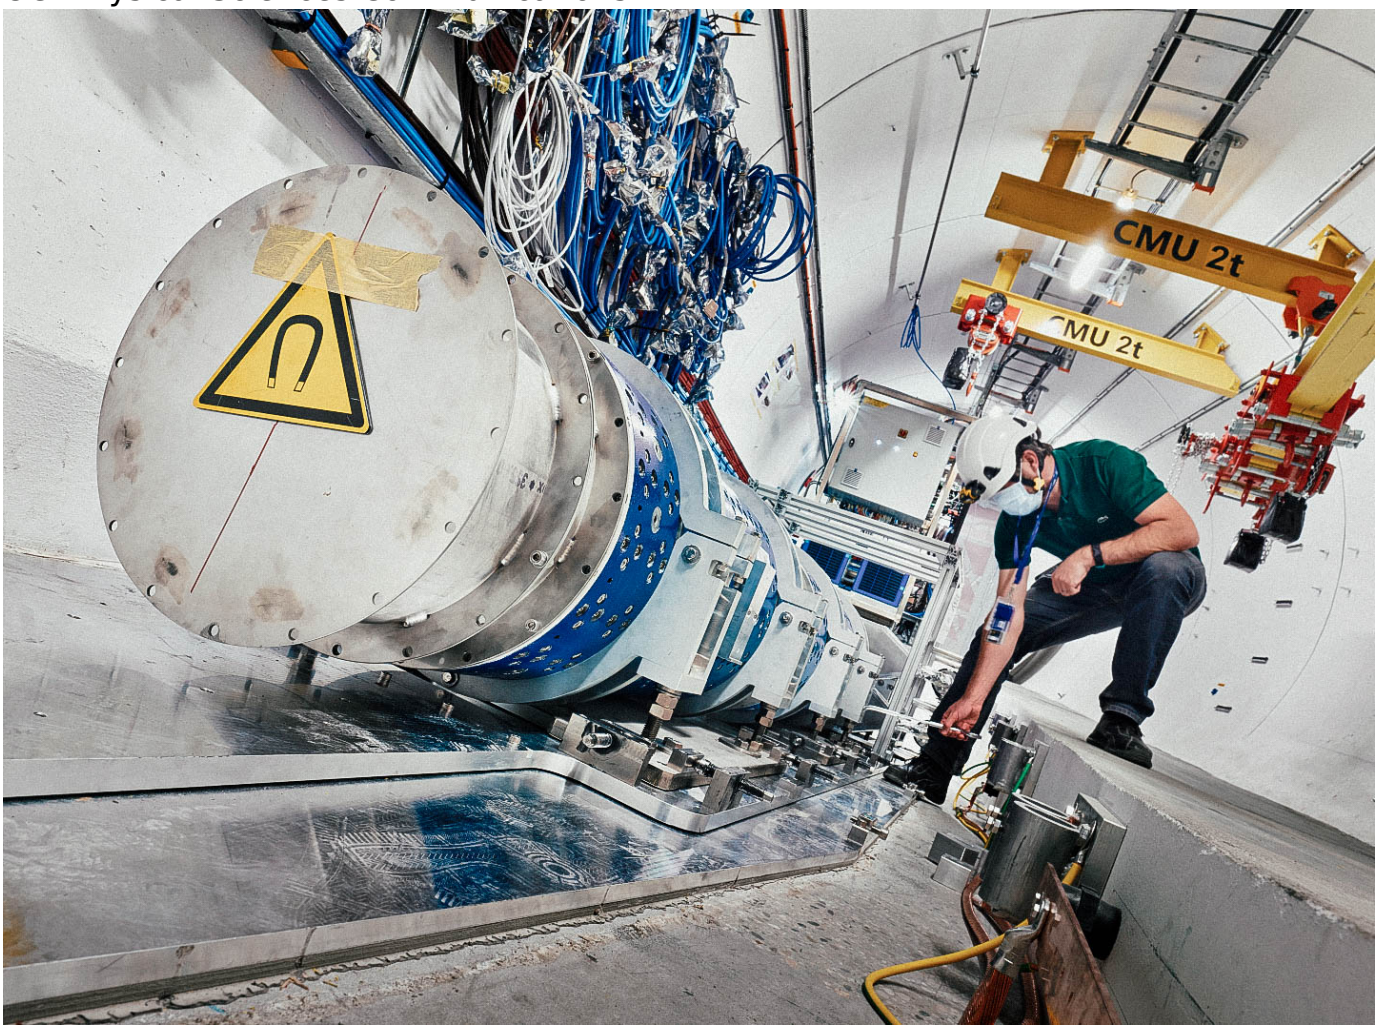
Live From CERN

On November 4, 2021, Professor Jonathan Feng and Ph.D. student Savannah Shively talked about their research on the new FASER particle detector during this live stream from CERN.

Monday, November 08, 2021

UCI Physical Sciences Communications



The FASER particle detector could fit in a studio apartment — but it might just find the biggest thing in the Universe.

Picture Credit:
CERN

You've read about the new FASER particle detector designed and built by UCI physicists. Now, see FASER for yourself in this live stream event from deep underground at CERN in Europe.

Videos
Virtual Talks
Physics & Astronomy
View PDF