A major Greenland glacier is melting away with the tide, which could signal faster sea level rise, study finds

A major glacier in northwest Greenland is interacting with the ocean tides, scientists reported Monday, resulting in previously unaccounted-for melting and potentially faster sea level rise.

Monday, May 08, 2023

Brandon Miller

CNN

A major glacier in northwest Greenland is interacting with the ocean tides, scientists reported Monday, resulting in previously unaccounted-for melting and potentially faster sea level rise.

In the Media